ACCORD WATSON WARM RECEPTION IN LEHIGH

Congressman Makes Tour To Acquaint Himself With Needs of District

MADE GOOD IMPRESSION

ALLENTOWN, Aug. 24.—Seldom has a stranger in Lehigh been received with such cordiality as Congressman Henry W. Watson, the Republican nominee in the new Ninth District, composed of Bucks and Lehigh counties. His industry as a canvasser has created a favorable impression of his diligence in Congress, where he is a member of the Ways and Means Committee.

Recently Mr. Watson spent several days in traveling throughout the length, breadth and lay-out of the county, to meet the party leaders and workers and get a first-hand look at its industries. He is a keen student of the tariff, and for lack of proper protection he blames the idleness of the furnace stacks, which were formerly the glory of the region. He doesn't want the numerous cement mills cast in the same idle category, and thinks with proper protection they can be saved. Many expert workers here in iron and cement are idle because of lack of proper tariff, since both pig iron and cement from abroad have been landed in seaboard cities of the United States at prices lower than they can be produced here. Mr. Watson is opposed to all that, and believes in fostering American labor and industry.

Last Saturday Mr. Watson, by invitation, was a guest at the famous annual picnic held by the Sons of Union Veterans at Central Park in honor of the Grand Army veterans of the Lehigh Valley. Of all the many regiments furnished by the Lehigh Valley for the preservation of the Union, but fifteen Grand Army men were present, and at that they made a good proportion of survivors. The veterans were delighted to meet him, and they made Mr. Watson deliver a speech, which they enthusiastically applauded.

It is the intention of Mr. Watson soon to spend a day or two in Catawauqua, which during the war was known the country over as the "Million Dollar Town," and the place (Continued on Page 4)

Farm Workman Narrowly Escapes Being Electrocuted

A man narrowly escaped electrocution yesterday when he tripped and falling in a field grabbed a high tension wire.

The man, William Carter, 25, of near Fallsington, was working on the King's Farms, between the Bristol Pike and the Bordentown Road, below Morrisville. A cable stretched across the field to the Warner Sand and Gravel Company, was charged, and as Carter fell he came into contact with the "hot" wire.

Carter was working near the cable which it is said was insulated and when the man fell he grabbed the cable with his right hand and later it was found that the insulation was broken and that Carter's hand came into contact with the bare wire. It is believed that 2,500 volts passed through Carter.

His right hand was terribly burned and he lay in the field for 15 minutes before being discovered by another workman. He was rushed to a Trenton hospital, and today is reported as doing fairly well.

FINDS THE BIGGEST TREE IN THE EAST LOCATED ON PATTON FARM, FLUSHING, JUST SHORT DISTANCE FROM BRISTOL

"Rodman Buttonwood" is Awarded Title by Penn Memorial Chairman — Grew from Switch in 1740 and Now Has Circumference at Five Feet Above Ground of 27 Feet and Five Inches

Writing in the Philadelphia Bulletin, Laura Lee yesterday gave a most interesting account of the East's "Biggest Tree," located near Bristol.

The article reads:

The largest tree in the Delaware Valley and possibly east of the Rockies.

It's the "Rodman Buttonwood," which towers into the sky on a tract owned by J. Lee and Price I. Patton, at Flushing, Bucks county, near Bristol.

Its circumference, breast-high, 4 1/2 to 5 feet above ground (which is the standard way of indicating a tree's size), is 27 feet, 5 inches.

The title of "heavyweight champion of the Eastern woods" was awarded to it by Dr. Edward E. Wildman, director of science education in the Philadelphia public schools. He came upon it in the Penn Tree hunt which he initiated as chairman of the Schools Committee on Penn Memorial, which next October will observe the 250th anniversary of the landing of William Penn in America.

The purpose of the hunt, in which tree lovers and school children are taking part, is to locate trees that were part of the primeval forest in the Delaware River Valley when Penn arrived. So far, 103 trees have been accepted and published in two lists in The Bulletin, one yesterday and the other on July 7.

Sad to say, however, this giant buttonwood was rejected as a member of the "Old Tree Club." It's only 192 years old!

You have to be at least 250 years old to get in this club. Some of the members are 400 and 450 years old (they were big fellows when Penn arrived), and the Mantua Oak, over in New Jersey, is estimated to be five centuries old. Let's see . . . 1932 minus 500 years takes one back to 1432—which means the acorn that used to be this tree was sprouting about 60 years before Columbus discovered America.

The huge girth of the "Rodman Buttonwood" is attributed by experts to the fact that it grows in moist, well watered and well fed soil.

"The nature of the soil plays a vital part in judging a tree's age," said Dr. Wildman. "In this instance we have corroborative historical evidence. Davis' 'History of Bucks County,' says this tree grew from a sycamore riding whip that William Rodman stuck in the ground beside a spring at his home in 1740.

"This is the largest tree I've encountered or heard of in the East, with two exceptions.

"In 1915 a survey by the American Genetic Association located a buttonwood tree at Worthington, Ind., that was said to measure 45 feet, three inches in circumference one foot above the ground, but its circumference breast high was not given.

"Then, a possibly larger one was reported just 125 years ago, according to a copy of the Pennsylvania Farmer of last November 1, 1931, which was sent to me by C. E. Allen, of Moylan. It quotes a paper written by John Pearson, of Darby, August 28, 1807, for

BUCKS COUNTY BOYS CAPTURE 2ND HONORS

Took First Place in Preliminary Contest But Were
Finally Defeated

HONOR ARTHUR LANDIS

The three Bucks county boys who last week were sent to State College to take part in the State cattle judging contests, according to County Agent William F. Greenawalt, put in an excellent bid to become the State champions but in the end were nosed out by a delegation from Jefferson county.

Boys from 20 counties throughout the State took part in the judging on the first day of the contests and it was on this occasion that the Bucks county delegation, composed of Clarence Myers, Chalfont, and Stanley Sames and Albert Shaffer, Richlandtown, took first honors.

Following this six high teams were given another contest and in this the Jefferson county boys, who ranked fourth on the preliminary contest, came out first and the Bucks county team took second place. The winners of the State contest will compete in the national contest this fall.

Albert Shaffer placed eighth in the individual judging contest. One hundred and twenty boys took part in this event.

Another Bucks county boy, Arthur Landis, of Quakertown, who represented Bucks County and the leadership training school at State College last week, was elected governor of the leadership training school which will be held at State College next year.

Mr. Greenawalt announced that the 4-H boys' camp will open at New (Continued on Page 4) the 'Philadelphia Society for Promoting Agriculture,' under the title 'An Account of the Dimensions of American Trees,' which reports a buttonwood at Jefferson, Cayuga county, N. Y., as 47 feet, six inches in circumference, but at what height is not stated. He states that a door had been cut in the side of this tree, and that people used it as shelter.

"The standard breast-high measurement is the only fair way to compare the size of trees, for some trees with comparatively slender trunks have an enormous circumference at the roots. I know of many trees whose root circumference exceeds that of the 'Rodman Tree'."

The tree was "nominated" by Chester Preston Cook and H. Calvin Fritsch, both of Narberth. And while it didn't qualify as a Penn tree, it seems well satisfied with the excitement it has caused and the honor that has fallen its lot.

Sycamores or buttonwoods grow the largest among the hardwood trees, larger than the big oaks of Maryland's Eastern Shore. But all these Eastern trees are almost saplings compared to the giant sequoias of the Pacific Coast, some of which exceed by more than three times the girth of the "Rodman Buttonwood."

TRANS-ATLANTIC RACE NARROWS DOWN TO ONE

Solberg-Peterson Crash, Plane
Wrecked; Men Not Hurt

HUTCHINSONS AT N. B.

The trans-Atlantic air race to Oslo, Norway, narrowed down to a one plane affair today. Thomas Solberg and Carl Petersen, who left Floyd Bennett Airport, Brooklyn, at dawn yesterday, crashed at 8 p. m., e. d. t., last night at Barby's Harbor on Placentia Bay, Newfoundland. Both escaped injury but their plane was wrecked, eliminating them from the competition. But their rivals, Clyde A. Lee and John Bochtan, flying a Stinson monoplane christened "Green Mountain Boy," landed safely at Harbor Grace Airport, Newfoundland, at 8:20 a. m., e. d. t., today, after battling fog and storm throughout the night.

Both teams of fliers had hoped to reach Harbor Grace before nighttime last night, refuel and hop off for Oslo simultaneously. During the early morning, Lee and Bochtan landed their plane at Burga, Newfoundland, inspected it to make sure no damage had been done during the storm, and that the fuel supply was adequate, then took off again and landed at Harbor Grace, where they made a safe landing a short time later.

Meanwhile, George Hutchinson, Baltimore, and his "flying family" were at St. John's, New Brunswick, after completing the first leg of their projected flight to London.

Captain Wolfgang von Gronau, who recently crossed the Atlantic with his crew of three, was at Yakutat, Alaska, awaiting only favorable weather before continuing on to Cordova and then the trans-Pacific stages of his flight to the Orient.

A projected non-stop flight from New York to Rome awaited only favorable weather. William Ulbrich will fly this plane, and will take Dr. Leon M. Pisculi and Miss Edna Newcomer, a nurse, as passengers. Miss Newcomer is scheduled to drop to Florence by parachute in honor of Florence Nightingale, founder of modern nursing.

PECULIAR PLANT

By "The Stroller"

An attractive, sturdily-growing window-plant, minus a flower-pot? Believe it or not—there is one at the home of Mrs. Susan MacCorkle, Hulmeville.

The two stalks, now about six inches high, with bright green leaves, those of a wistaria vine, look most attractive against the window-background. The pieces of the vine appear on the inside of the house, in a little crack between the window and the sill.

The vine to which these two "interior" branches are attached, is located on the ground 3 feet lower than the window, and some distance to the left. The wistaria vine has been growing along the outside of the house for some years, and the owner was astonished to see the two pieces of green, growing apparently out of the wood several days ago.

CHUBBY BOY OF FIFTEEN MONTHS KILLED BY ELECTRIC TRAIN WHEN HE WANDERS TO TRACKS AT TULLYTOWN

Thomas Edward Patterson, Jr., Meets Horrible Death—Had Been Playing on Lawn—Not Missed Until Screeching of Train Brakes Was Heard by Grandfather

TULLYTOWN, Aug. 24.—A chubby little boy, 15 months old, met death last night beneath the wheels of a P. R. R. electric train almost within sight of the child's grandparents, one of whose sight he had slipped just for an instant.

The little fellow, Thomas Edward Patterson, Jr., toddled down the embankment of the Patterson lawn and was playing on the west-bound track when the train came along. The screeching of the brakes attracted the attention of the grandfather, who found the body of his grandson.

The tot's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Edward Patterson, Sr., with their two children, the little one who was killed last night and a three-year-old daughter, Elsie, along with Mrs. Patterson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Wiley, reside in the house on the west side of the P. R. R., just west of the high bridge, above here.

The house sits up on an elevation above the railroad.

CHILDREN, AS GUESTS, THRONG TO COUNTY FAIR

Opens at Quakertown Yesterday; Eighteenth Annual Exhibit

THURS., GRANGE DAY

QUAKERTOWN, Aug. 24.—With the opening of the Bucks County Fair, here, yesterday morning, approximately 1,000 school children were present as guests of the association.

Yesterday marked the opening of the 18th annual exhibit of the fair association, and the displays on view are the most elaborate, and largest in number ever seen at the Bucks County Fair. It will continue until Saturday night.

Nearly a hundred head of cattle are included in the stock exhibit, coming from stock breeding farms throughout eastern and central Pennsylvania. This is the largest display of its kind in years, and the poultry and other farm exhibits are also said to be up to average.

Tickets were mailed out to several thousand children, and a large percentage of them were put into use yesterday morning, a short time after the gates opened for the first time.

Today is featured as Quakertown Day, and all former residents of the section were urged to return and many of the stores and plants in Quakertown are closed to permit employees to go to the fair.

Today the Pennsylvania Farmers' Protective Association will add another local to its organization, A. H. Stover, of Dublin, addressing a group of farmers of that section, in the fight (Continued on Page 3)

About 100 people attended. The committee in charge included: Mrs. Emma Sutton, chairlady; Mrs. Mary Mitchell, Mrs. G. Ruby, Mrs. Adelaide White, Mrs. Stella Fennimore.

CHRISTENED

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ferry, Jefferson avenue, was christened John Aloysius in St. Mark's Church Sunday. Sponsors were: Mr. and Mrs. William Morris, of Spruce street.

Early last evening Mrs. Patterson, taking her daughter Elsie, went to a nearby stream so the child could wade in the water. The mother would not permit the little girl to go wading alone, and as a matter of safety for her child, went with her.

Little Thomas was left in the care of his grandparents. The grandfather was busily engaged working on an automobile in the yard while the grandmother was further back on the lawn. Thomas was playing about the yard and had been watching his grandfather fix the car and was spending his time running back and forth between his grandparents.

Suddenly there was a screeching of brakes and Mr. Wiley looking up saw a train coming to a stop east of the Tullytown passenger station. Intuitively he yelled to his wife, "Where is Tommy?"

"Isn't he there?" called back Mrs. Wiley.

"No!" he replied.

Then the grandfather slid down the embankment onto the railroad right-of-way, and there lay a mangled little body.

"Here he is," sobbed the man.

The mother, returning with her daughter, was grief-stricken, and not being permitted to see her loved one, frantically paced back and forth upon the lawn, wringing her hands in agony and moaning, "O her baby."

Deputy-Coroner W. Furman Young was summoned and took charge of the body.

The Rev. Herbert Sanders, pastor of Tullytown M. E. Church, will officiate at the funeral service in Bristol Centery tomorrow at 2 p. m.

Bristol Motorist Hears of Death of Boy He Gave Lift

A well known Bristol electrician returning from Philadelphia last evening picked up the Courier and read of the accident on the Bristol Pike in which one boy, John Sweeney, Jr., 13, was killed and his cousin, Joseph Bradley, 12, injured.

He read the account of the accident in which it was stated that the two boys had been given a ride from Crofton to a point opposite Sweeney's home near the foot bridge across the P. R. R., near Maple Shade.

"Turning to his wife, Charles G. Rathke, 1232 Pond street, said:

"I bet they are the two boys I brought up from Crofton."

Mr. Rathke went to police headquarters and told his story to the police. "I never knew a thing about the accident until I read it in the Courier tonight," he told Officer Spezzano, who was on desk duty.

The Highway Motor Patrol at South Langhorne was advised of what Mr. Rathke had reported.

There is not the slightest blame attached to Mr. Rathke for the accident. He met the boys at the drug store in Crofton Monday evening and they asked him for a ride up the road. He consented.

"I stopped my car opposite the house where the boys said they were going and let them out. One remarked 'that's a break!'"

The two boys stepped from in back of Rathke's machine and were struck by one driven by Milton Thomas, Philadelphia.

HONOR FOR THE CADETS

Great credit is due to that group of Legionnaires who have week after week labored with the Cadet Corps of Bracken Post which on Monday brought home to Bristol championship honors of the state.

Bristol now proudly boasts of the champion bugle and drum corps of the junior division of American Legion Posts. And justly so. The corps is made up of Bristol boys who have practiced diligently and worked hard to improve themselves and to be a credit to the organization sponsoring them as well as the town in which they live.

The Bracken Post Cadet Corps also did make a very snappy appearance and decided improvement has been shown day after day as the group marched through the streets. The boys are intensely interested, march very well and exhibit excellent discipline.

They will have the honor of opening the third day of the next state convention. May they retain the honors so justly won for many years to come. To do this they must not forget as one of their leaders expressed it: "It is easier won than to hold."

UGLY SCHOOL BUILDINGS PASS

Time was when the announcement was made that a new school was to be built in any given neighborhood the residents thereof experienced a depression of spirits. The reason was simple enough. The architecture of schools in years gone by was as distinguished as that of a canning factory. Neighborhoods were anything but improved by such acquisitions.

Happy the change that has come about in school design in later years. With little if any additional cost it has become the practice to engage competent architects with the result that new school buildings are not merely creditable to the community but actually adornments.

As a consequence congratulations are in order, nowadays, when announcement is made that some neighborhood is to be favored with a new schoolhouse. There has come about a comfortable feeling in the public mind that such structures will enhance the attractiveness of the neighborhood, become points of interest stimulating to community pride and increase the value of adjacent real estate.

This is as true in rural communities as in the city. Consolidated schools are architecturally attractive and pleasingly landscaped, and where one-room schools are being built they are no longer red shanties.

Much is being accomplished in the beautification of old and originally unbecoming buildings. Tourists are impressed by the attractively painted schoolhouses, with their well-kept grounds, encountered in many rural sections. The greater part of this work is done by teachers and pupils, which means that it will be only a matter of time when the taxpayers will demand and make possible "little red school-houses" that are good to look at and fit to educate children in.

Scientists tell us that rockets will be the most dreadful menace in the next war. They will be if the neighbor's small boy has anything to do with them.

"MURDER of the NIGHT CLUB LADY"

THE NEW THATCHER COLT DETECTIVE MYSTERY

BY ANTHONY ABBOT

COPYRIGHT, 1931, BY COWICI-FRIEDE INC., DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

CHAPTER THIRTY-EIGHT

CHRISTINE was in the room at the time, so was Guy Everett, so was Mrs. Carewe. None of them seems to remember that Rowland did anything suspicious with the sleeve. I should fancy it would be a deliberate and delicate—and certainly dangerous—operation. But even granting that he was able to manage all that, what more are we asked to believe? That the scorpion remained quietly in the sleeve all the time Lola was out of the house? It seems to me a man of Rowland's intelligence would hesitate before taking such a risk of failure as that?

"By jumping juniper," exclaimed Dougherty, "I must say Thatcher, that I didn't figure all that out. Is Vincent Rowland cleared in your opinion, then?"

"By no means. If he was mixed up in any crooked schemes, and Guy Everett and Baldwin were threatening a complete exposure he had a perfect motive for wanting to get rid of those two girls. He had the intelligence to plan it. It is even possible that he connived with Lola, and made her his dupe in getting the scorpions—she thought they were to murder someone else, never dreaming that they were intended for her. That is a possibility. Whoever is guilty made Lola purchase the scorpions—I feel sure of that. But we have no complete case yet, against Rowland, or anyone else. Until we find the modus operandi of the murders, I think we should let the case seem as unsolvable a puzzle as possible."

Dougherty poured himself his fourth cup of steaming coffee, and ordered another serving of stuffed Long Island duckling.

"Agreed, Thatcher. Have you found any indications pointing to anyone else?"

"Plenty. There is a distinct possibility that the murder was committed by Mrs. Carewe!"

"Thatcher! Good God, man—what are you saying? You don't really mean that seriously?"

Thatcher Colt was calmly lighting a cigarette.

"I am in deadly earnest about it. There has not been since the moment we walked through the penthouse door anything that seemed spontaneously affectionate or genuine in the relationship of Lola and her mother. All the outer signs were there but not the inner spirit. Mrs. Carewe has grieved nobly, but as far as I am concerned, unconvincedly. Her hysterics and her excitement have not moved me. Only once have I seen genuine emotion in that old lady. That was when I roused all her excitement by the mention of the name of Basil."

"But that has nothing to do with this case," interjected Dougherty testily.

"Perhaps not. At all events, there I found a real reaction."

"But a mother—to kill her own daughter?"

Thatcher Colt shrugged his shoulders.

"It happens every year—almost every month," he reminded the District Attorney. "Fratricide, matricide, patricide—blood relatives let blood in great quantities."

"I know—but among people of this class!"

"Consider the facts," returned Colt. "It happens among the good solid citizens of the United States. I can quote you innumerable examples. What of that amiable mother of Havre de Grace, down in Maryland, who poisoned her children to collect the insurance? Do you think she was a monster? There are a hundred like her. And how many that are never caught and punished, God only knows. And by the way, the death note was left at the desk just about the time the old lady came home from the Palace."

"But what motive could Mrs. Carewe have?" rumbled Dougherty unhappily.

"Hatred is the most common when mothers kill their children, or children their mothers and fathers. Very seldom is insurance the cause. Insanity may be a word to gloss it all over. Or, Mrs. Carewe may have some practical motive which we have not as yet discovered."

"I am sure you will find that Lola was not killed by her mother," Dougherty stated with all the conviction of deep-rooted prejudice. "Anybody else?"

"The rest of the servants, naturally. They, too, had opportunity. Only someone with access to the premises could have done these crimes. Eunice does not seem to me to have brains enough. As for Chung—"

"He looks to me to have dark ways and peculiar tricks," paraphrased Dougherty. "He's an Oriental and—"

At this moment, Colt was called to the telephone. When he returned, the chief wore a slight smile, and at once told us the encouraging news he had just been given by Inspector Flynn:

"First," explained Thatcher Colt, "Flynn has had another talk with Ricardo Villafranca, of the laboratory supply agency. The South American at once confirmed all the details regarding the scorpion mentioned in Baldwin's letter. Also he told the circumstances of the last meeting he had with Doctor Baldwin—the one at West End Avenue and Seventy-second Street about ten this morning. It seems that Baldwin called Villafranca and insisted on meeting him in the manure described by Deems this morning in his report. This did not puzzle Villafranca. Baldwin had never called at his shop to carry the scorpions off with him. Of course, it was understood between them that the scorpions were for the use of scientific research. Nevertheless, Baldwin had always been very secretive. They must meet away from the shop. Apparently this morning Baldwin had no idea that he was being followed. Although when we returned his needle and apparatus to him, he should have been suspicious. Furthermore, Villafranca willingly gave our man another box, a duplicate of the several used in this affair. All search of the pent-house yielded no further signs of such boxes. But Flynn has traced one just the same. The ashes in the fireplace when sifted showed the exact same size of nails as in the sample—and the same number; also some infinitesimal fragments of burned cotton. Thus ends the search for the boxes—the second set which Baldwin undoubtedly gave to Lola. The killer burned them in the fireplace."

"Thatcher," groaned Dougherty, "I am at last beginning to believe we are up against a problem that cannot be solved!"

"Nonsense," returned Colt. "Let's talk about something else."

And for the next quarter of an hour we discussed the latest move for arms reduction, the erratic movements of the stock market, and the finding of a treasure box in Long Island, filled with coins bearing Phoenician inscriptions.

Promptly at two o'clock we were back at Headquarters and in the private office of Thatcher Colt. In our absence, the papers stacked for the chief's scrutiny had accumulated two feet high. Colt had missed the line-up that morning, and there were notations of significant facts developed during the daily parade of criminals on the platform erected in the old police gymnasium. Colt attended the line-up whenever possible. It was he who abolished the use of masks on the faces of the assembled detectives. Instead he set up a range of nine powerful lamps beating down on the prisoner exposed to the glare. Every other light in the room is out. The prisoner is blinded, but he is radiantly visible to the army of man-hunters seated before him. It was here that Colt promoted patrolmen, and gave public praise and blame, his rewards going most often to the patrolmen who had shot down criminals in open battle. It was here, too, that Colt announced some of the most important changes he introduced into the department, including the opening of the police school for rookies—"Enter to learn and leave to serve"—and his bureau for free medical attention for the department.

Apparently the line-up of the morning after the New Year's Eve celebration had been full of surprises. Two Italian troubadours who sang and played for the riders on the Dyckman Street ferry boats had been caught with several ounces of morphine hidden in the bellies of their guitars. Through them the head of the narcotic squad was working to trace back the drugs to the sources—a never-ending quest that seemingly succeeds only in spots; the hardiest of all wars waged by the police. There is an immeasurable distance between the arrest of the lowly dope-peddler and the conviction of the man higher up. Beneath the typewritten report on the ferry-boat minstrels appeared a clipping from one of the daily tabloids in New York—a vicious attack on the Police Department and on Colt personally, and demanding that politics be thrown out of the department. With a brief smile, Colt thrust this aside. Ever since he had been in public life he had known, as does every other strong administrator, constant assaults like these. They may originate in someone with an object to serve. But as often as not they are simply yellow journalism; an unsuccessful newspaper trying to make a noise in town. They are a symptom of modern political life in modern American cities. Thatcher Colt had time for only a casual glance at the printed attack.

HIBERNIANS TRIUMPH OVER BRISTOL A. A.

The Hibernians continued the pace-setting of the Lower Bucks County League by scoring a 4-1 triumph over the Bristol A. A. nine last evening on Sullivan's field.

The A's outthit the "Hibs," 7-6, but could not come through in the pinches, except in the third when their only run was scored and further damage prevented by a remarkable catch by "France" Dougherty, right fielder for the winners.

The bases were loaded at the time and Paul Barrett at the plate. Barrett connected with the first ball pitched and sent a long fly to right field by the cinder path. The hit was labeled for at least a three bagger but Dougherty running at full speed and eyeing the ball in big-league fashion made a wonderful catch but could not prevent a run from scoring. The play was converted into a twin-killing when Fields was caught trying to score the second run on the play.

"Pete" Pitcoe, Hibernian moundsman, hurled in fine style, fanning eight batters and issuing but one pass. He was in danger quite often but bore down when he had to and when he did there was nothing doing. The A's just swinging and sitting down. Pitcoe also collected two of his team's hits, as did Gene Dugan.

The victory kept the A. O. H. margin on first place in the circuit, a full game.

Maple Shade Nine Victors Over Third Ward

The Third Ward A. C. was nosed out by the Maple Shade ball nine last night on the Maple Shade diamond. Score stood 3-2.

Roy Reese did the twirling for the losers and would have had a victory but due to errors went down to defeat. Reese allowed but three safe blows.

Davis was the winning pitcher and pitched a fine game, being very invincible in the pinches. Both pitchers struck out seven batters.

Ray Purcell led the hitters of the game but two safe blows. On Friday evening the Warders will play the Maple Shade team in a return game at Sullivan's field.

GAME CALLED

At St. Ann's field last night the game between First Ward and Jefferson A. C. was called at the end of the fourth inning, because of darkness. At the time, First Ward was leading, 13-5. Out of Britton, McCurry and "Lefty" the latter was the only one able to stop the "First Warders." McClefferty's triple was the feature of the game, which was a mighty blast into left center. This game will be replayed some time next week. Tonight the J. A. C. will play the Depression A. C. at St. Ann's field. Paul Keating and Joe Britton will be the battery for the J. A. C.

PAPER NINE ELIMINATED

TULLYTOWN, Aug. 24.—The Paterson Parchment Paper Company's team was eliminated from the Lower Bucks County League second half race here last night when they were trounced by the Hulmeville team, 9-2.

Howard Black was the winning hurler in the grudge match and for five innings, blanked the Tullytown team. The two runs were pushed across at the end of the game. Ted Roper was the losing twirler of the game. Previous to this fray, Roper had twice beaten the first half winners.

crossing, still regarded weather reports as too unfavorable for his projected return flight from New York to the British Isles, but was ready to hop as soon as possible.

ST. JOHN, N. B., Aug. 24.—(INS)—George Hutchinson's "Flying Family" was poised here today for the second leg of their leisurely flight from New York to Europe via the Arctic route.

Hutchinson, with his wife, two children, and crew of four, expected to take off by 11 a. m. (10 a. m., e. d. t.) for Port Menier, on Anticosti Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, 330 miles away.

If the weather is favorable the next leg, a 470-mile hop to Hopedale, Labrador, also may be made today.

The "Flying Family's" great Sikorski amphibian "City of Richmond," reached here at 4:05 p. m. yesterday, 5 hours and 58 minutes after leaving New York, completing a trip of 511 miles.

Finds Biggest Tree in East Short Distance From Bristol

The fame of the Penn trees has reached Indianapolis. C. K. Calvert, of the Board of Sanitary Commissioners there, has written Dr. Wildman expressing the hope that seeds of the old trees may be obtained "for sentimental reasons," to be used in their planting program to conserve the city water supply.

"This search reveals other interesting trees, though not old enough to be Penn trees," said Dr. Wildman. "There is a Sequoia gigantea near Painter's arboretum, at Lima, that is the largest of its kind east of the Rockies."

"The Bartram Oaks, at Old St. David's Church, Devon, and another, probably planted by Humphrey Marshall, the botanist (cousin of John Bartram) at his home at Marshallton, all show a unique 'wing' or blade growth from their trunks and branches. This is not mentioned in the botanical books concerning these rare trees. John Bartram also planted one of these oaks in his garden, but it died many years ago. The Bartram Oak is a natural hybrid between the pin oak and some other species."

"Then there's a Cedar of Lebanon at the home of Pennsylvania's most famous botanist of the 19th century, Dr. Darlington, on S. Church street, in West Chester. It now measures 8 feet, 10½ inches in circumference, breast high. Dr. Darlington's 'Flora Castanea,' published first in 1837 and in several revised editions, is a model of careful work."

"A copper beech on the Miller farm, one and a quarter miles south of West Grove, on Route 1, was at first thought to be a Penn tree, but further examination indicates it was grafted on the roots of a native beech. A very fine and interesting tree, and our largest beech thus far measured. Its circumference breast high is 13 feet, 6 inches."

"The Pennsylvania Forestry Association, organized here in 1886, wants to see a large area of the last bit of primeval forest remaining in Pennsylvania secured this year as a memorial to Penn. It lies on the east bank of Tionesta creek, near Sheffield, in northwestern Pennsylvania. Carl P. Birkinbine, of Bala, son of John Birkinbine, the association's first president, is secretary."

"The president of the association, S. L. Smedley, has executed a splendid memorial planting at Media this year—10,000 trees in memory of George Washington, planted by Boy Scouts in April. In October, 10,000 more are to be planted in memory of Penn."

"Mr. Smedley, who also is chairman of the Delaware County Park Commission, has a Penn tree on "Twin Ash Farm, near Edgemont, Delaware county, that was in the original list published. His farm has been in the Smedley family's hand since Penn's day, as shown by an original deed that he has. An Indian trail runs through it."

Many other trees nominated were found to be outside the Delaware Valley or their size is attributed more to rich or wet soil than to age.

The first reason caused elimination of an oak at Forty-Fort, opposite Wilkes-Barre, nominated by H. M. Vastine, Harrisburg; one at Arney's Mount Friends' Meeting House, on the Pemberton-Jobstown road, Springfield township, Burlington county N. J., nominated by Springfield Discus, and two oaks at Oxford, cited by M. E. Snodgrass, of Oxford.

A beautiful "twin" white oak at "Twin Oaks," the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lindley S. Chandler, on Creek road, near the Red Clay Creek Presbyterian Church and near Marshallton, Del., just failed of membership because out from its massive roots bubbles "one of the finest springs in Delaware." Its trunk has a breast-high circumference of nearly 20 feet, and about 10 feet above ground it divides into two huge branches.

Witness also caused "rejection" of a large white oak on Tyler's Lake, Barnsboro, Mantua township, N. J., nominated by Morris G. Thomas, and a magnificent white oak tree (C. B. H. 14 feet, 3 inches) on the farm of Mrs. Clarie H. Rowland, Upper Providence township, Delaware county, growing in a meadow on the west side of Crum Creek north of State road.

Trees nominated by Mr. Cook include three ruled out because they're not in the Delaware Valley—a white oak in Donegal Presbyterian Church, Lancaster county; a buttonwood in the yard of the old Brown house, near the concrete road between Wakefield and Quarryville, Lancaster county; and a great oak at Basking Ridge, Somerset county, N. J.

Delaware's largest known buttonwoods were not admitted to the membership. One, on the Benjamin White property in Magnolia, has a 16-foot circumference, but William S. Taber, Delaware State Forester, reported it was known to have been planted in 1776. The other, a 14-foot tree on the property of Henry Garrett, Jr., Wilmington, was ruled out because of too-wet soil.

Spent $16,835 For S. Langhorne Schools

tion amounted to $1900. The largest contributing item for this side of the ledger was the sum of $10,678.40, the amount collected by taxes. The end of the fiscal year July, 1931, left a balance of $675.85 in the treasury, it was stated.

John C. Douthart, tax collector, reported the total amount of taxes collected, both per capita and property, netted $11,278.16.

The total receipts for the year were $16,899.60, and the expenditures for the school year amounted to $16,835.86, leaving a balance of $63.74.

From this report it was found that instruction, which cost the school board $7,424.24, was almost half as much as the rest of the expenses combined. Sheer operation of the plant, alleged to have been $1,211.51, was the next dominating expenditure.

Accord Watson Warm Reception In Lehigh

where every man, woman and child had taken a Liberty Bond. Catasaqua is the site where David Thomas in 1837 made the first pig iron with anthracite blast in America, but now its iron stacks and mills are idle, as well as its famous horse shoe plant. Mr. Watson is interested to discover if appropriate legislation can be of help. His canvass of Catasaqua will be an intensive one.

One of the most pleasing things that befell him in his first tour of Lehigh was an invitation to attend the home-coming and reunion at Weisenberg Church next Sunday, August 28. Such a church event was new to him, the idea of all the folks scattered far and wide coming back, and he eagerly accepted the invitation and will bring Mrs. Watson along, and stay for the church dinner. Weisenberg is a famous old country church, beautifully located in the hills of Weisenberg township, just off the great concrete highway from Claussville to the Berks county line, known as the Kistler's Valley Road. Mr. and Mrs. Watson will arrive early in the morning and stay for dinner, served by the ladies of the church, as well as take in the services. For these dinners, usually, the members of the church donate plump chickens, home-cured ham and often a fatted calf. The people are pleased the Congressman takes so much interest in their affairs and customs, and desire to meet him.

Mr. Watson will open his speaking campaign at the Lehigh Republican County Meeting at Community Park on September 17, where he has been booked by ex-Senator Horace W. Schantz, the county chairman, as one of the most prominent of the orators.
